Spring into Health teams forming now

The Montgomery County Health Education Advisory Board is sponsoring an eight week physical activity program and we want you to be a part of it.

It's that time of year again when we all start thinking that summer is right around the corner and that we really need to loose some weight. Well then our program is a great place for you to start. "Spring Into Health" is an eight-week physical activity program to get you up off the couch and moving.

How the program works?

Get a team of 6 people together (one will serve as the team captain). Team members begin tracking their individual mileage for miles walked or ran starting on March 5th- April 29th. The team captain will gather team totals each week and turn into the Montgomery County Health Unit. One team will be crowned the "Spring Into Health" winner for most miles at the end of the eight week program.

Where do I pick up the registration packets?

Pick up your team packet at the Montgomery County Health Unit, Monday-Friday 8:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Registration begins Monday, February 1st and ends Friday, March 3rd.

How much does the program cost?

The cost is $5 per person ($30 team). Your registration fee will go towards the winning prizes at the end of the program.

Prizes?

The winning team will win a traveling trophy and team prizes but everyone who participates will be a winner. You win by improving your health!

Who will be our competition?

Your team will compete against others in the county to see which team can walk or run the most miles in the eight-week time frame. Schools, businesses, organizations and individuals will compete against one other. We have challenge flyers if you would like to challenge another school, business or organization. Make it a friendly and healthy competition amongst your friends.

This program is a lot of fun and is a great way to help you loose those unwanted pounds.

Join the fun and get healthy!!

MOUNT IDA - Two of Mount Ida's finest will continue their football careers at Southern Arkansas University.

Anthony Spurling and Logan Abernathy sat before an auditorium filled with school mates, family and friends and signed their letters of commitment to play football for the Southern Arkansas University Muleriders.

Each young man was accompanied by their parents and the Mount Ida Lion football coaching staff at the time of their signings.

The Mulerider staff will look to both men to help rebuild a powerful offense.

Spurling is listed as a tight end prospect for SAU. He is quite familiar with the position even though he missed most of the 2016 regular season due to an injury. He returned early in the playoff run and was a vital part of the state championship run this year.

Abernathy has had success on both sides of the ball as a lineman, but will be expected to help shore up the offensive line at SAU. While playing for the Lions he often drew double and triple teams from opposing defenses while leading the Mount Ida offensive line.

Coach Mike White is excited to see these young men take this next step. He stressed that the opportunity to play in a state championship game was key in getting these scholarships for his players.

David Spurling, Anthony's father, stated that he and his wife Audrey were very proud of their son and looked forward to seeing him play on Saturday's.

Floyd and Jennifer Abernathy were equally as proud of their son Logan. Floyd stated that he had always hoped Logan would play college football and it was a blessing to see him get a chance to fulfill his dream.

Anthony is looking to major in wildlife conservation and Logan is considering wildlife biology.

Coach White stated that SAU's coaching staff was impressed with the size of both players and he is excited to watch them grow while working their way through college.

He added that to his knowledge this is the first time he has had a player receive money for playing football while attending college.

MOUNT IDA - Seniors from all three Montgomery County Schools received a little slice of real life thanks to the "Get Real" program presented by the University of Arkansas.

The program was held on the Mount Ida campus this year with students from Caddo Hills, Oden and Mount Ida receiving an opportunity to see what it's like to balance a home budget for one month.

The program simulates one month of an adult's life. Students were randomly assigned situations such as marital status, occupation, children and salaries. They were then sent around the gymnasium where they met with volunteers from locale businesses and civic organizations regarding life events. They were required to purchase a home and a vehicle and then as they walked around the room they experienced different scenarios from entertainment expenses to accidents. Along the way they were expected to balance their bank accounts and stay within their budget for the month.

The program helps outgoing seniors gain a better grasp on balancing a budget while providing the necessary items needed in life.

Herbert Eugene Lovejoy

Herbert Eugene Lovejoy (Gene to his friends and family), age 91, of Mount Ida, passed away on Thursday, February 2, 2017.

Gene was born in the tiny town of Reed Springs, Missouri to Frank and Lois Lovejoy. He was the oldest of four children and had two brothers, Donny and Bobby and a sister, JoAnn. The family lived in a rustic log cabin that is still standing on the banks of the river where he grew up thanks to the preservation efforts of the town Reed Springs.

Growing up in small town America, Gene attended the local high school where he played the trumpet at Blue Eye High School. He had after school jobs as well to help out with the family, who struggled after the death of his father of scarlet fever. Gene had also had scarlet fever and was bedridden for a year afterwards, losing most of the skin on the bottom of his feet which left him flat footed.

With the advent of World War II, Gene moved to California. He wanted to join the war efforts, but he was turned down in every branch of the service for those flat feet. He joined the California State Guard until he joined the Merchant Marines where he served in a gunnery position during General Quarters. Gene loved being on the open ocean and he was very proud of the vital lifelines provided by the Merchant Marines.

It was while he was in California that he married a young woman from Mount Ida, Arkansas, Barthella Gaston. The couple married just after WWII and settled in the beautiful valley of Exeter, just 49 miles south of San Francisco. Gene worked for Lockheed on the Birds Eye Missile project in the 60's. Later in the sixties they moved back to Mount Ida to be near Barthella's parents and to take care of them. They built their home on her parent's small farm.

Gene loved carpentry and he loved building and painting projects. Their home was filled with his work—plant holders, benches, porch swings. He once built a wooden donkey pulling a cart and painted it in bright colors. Two of his porch swings still welcome family. He built a cradle for his first grandchild which was passed to each of his grandchildren. His workshop was always a happy clutter of organized tools, parts saved from just about everything and the plans for his next project.

He retired from US Electrical Motors in Mena.

Services were held at 2pm at the Gaston Cemetery in Mount Ida with an honor guard.

Survivors include his son, Doug Lovejoy of Mount Ida; daughter, Pati Brown of Mount Ida; four grandchildren—Jason Brown, Dawn Eick, Mandy Jones and Jennifer Sanak; and seven great grandchildren—Alyssa, Katy, Samuel, Jamie, Elijah, Casey, Jayden and Maddox.

Arrangements were under the direction of Davis-Smith Funeral Home, Glenwood.

Have you heard the saying that one man's trash is another man's treasure? Some members of Ouachita Artists have taken this idea to heart and turned items that some people would toss out into works of art.

As an example, consider Robert Cavanaugh's use of old tools to form metal sculptures of birds, insects, and animals. With creativity, whimsy, and some welding, what was an old rake becomes a centipede, horseshoes evolve into an armadillo, and a pink flamingo emerges from a variety of metal parts and pieces.

Dried gourds, under the skillful hands of Patti Quinn, are carved into filigrees of oak, maple or other leaf shapes to become beautiful containers. Or they may be attractively painted, like those produced by Vonda Vines.

In Gene Sparling's workshop, boles become bowls. He collects fallen trees from his property and, with his skill at using a lathe, turns them into delicate wooden containers. When you see one of these treasures you will want to pick it up to feel the smooth surface and follow the grain of the wood species, which differs from one object to another.

Mike Sawyer cuts young saplings and carves them into walking sticks.

Then larger trees become rough hewn occasional tables or garden mushroom stools with the bark still attached.

Intricate designs using a wide variety of woods cut into geometric shapes produce

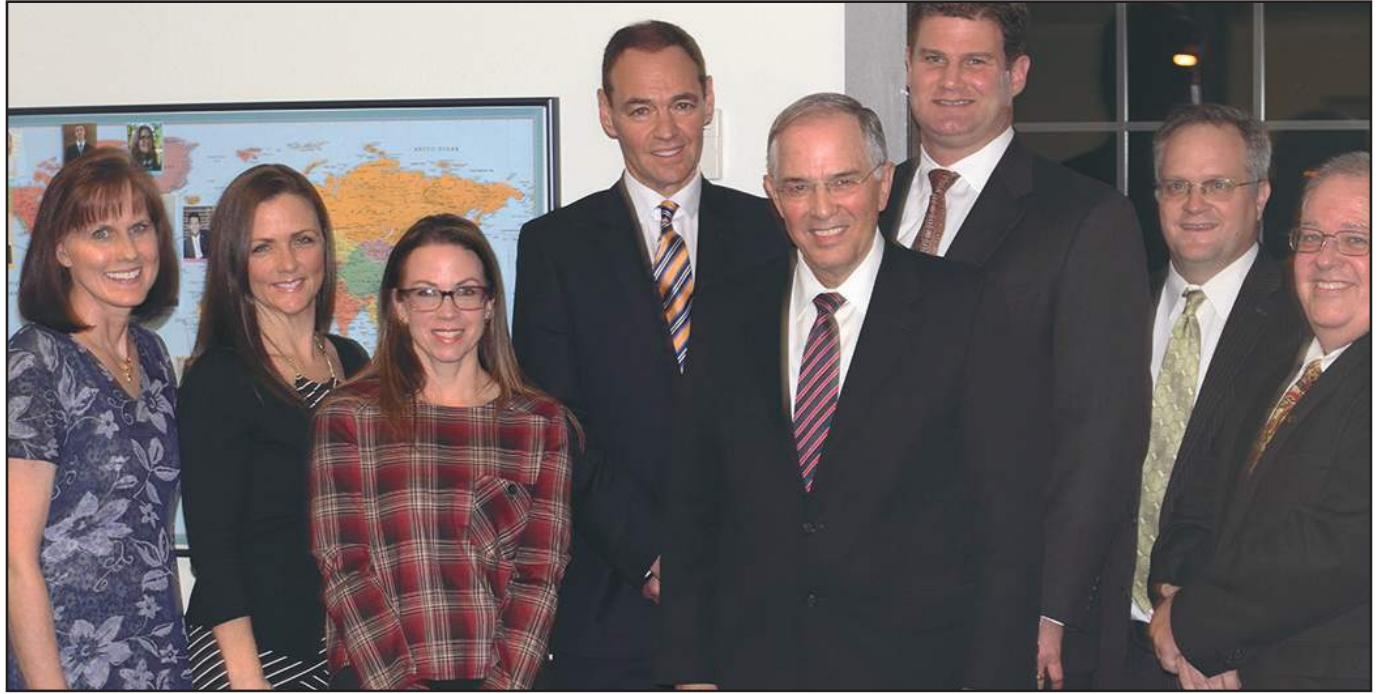

Paul Lemke's small flat pieces. They may be used as cutting boards, cheese boards or table pads for hot dishes, but they are attractive enough to just be displayed as works of art in themselves. No two pieces are alike.

Carved wooden figures are the hallmark of Hodge Black. Some of them retain the original bark, and others are more polished. Some are painted by Mary Black. This popular wood carver's works are displayed in our gallery since he retired at the end of last year and closed his Splendid Splinters shop next door.

Our youngest Ouachita Artist, Iris Sawyers, uses found objects and odds and ends of paper and fabric to create her coven of small Ouachita witches. If you don't have a kitchen witch at your house you should consider adopting one of these. She also makes flowers from various types of paper.

Velma Lippert will astound you with the beautiful wall art works she creates from just about anything you can imagine: glass, fabric, paper, tiles, paint, glitter, and even crockery. Somehow she combines these into colorful decorative pieces that catch your attention and your admiration.

The next time you are in Mt. Ida, come by the Ouachita Artists Gallery and Studio to see proof of the old adage that "trash," with imagination, creativity and skill, can become true art treasures!

Local youth and leaders attended a special devotional hosted by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints recently with prominent church leader Elder Neil L. Andersen speaking at the North Little Rock event. Andersen is a member of the Quorum of the Twelve, whose role is to be a special witness of Jesus Christ throughout the world. It was Andersen's first visit to Arkansas as an apostle. The event brought together 543 youth, ages 12-18, from the North Little Rock, Little Rock, and Searcy Stakes of the church along with their leaders. Brenda Palmer of Mount Ida, who serves as the Young Women President for the Little Rock Stake, observed that the youth listened intently to Elder Andersen's counsel to develop their lives by running the race of faith. She remarked, "He encouraged them to believe that God keeps his promises and that faith in those promises provides the strength to finish the race." Palmer's husband, Kimball, serves in the presidency of the Little Rock Stake which is composed of eleven congregations in central and southern Arkansas. The Palmers attend the Glenwood Branch of the LDS church.

flexibility and transferability to serve our constituents. Our ability to serve our institutional mission has never been greater. This merger would not have been possible without the tremendous support of the Rich Mountain Board of Trustees, the faculty, and the staff," stated Chancellor Phillip Wilson, Ed.D.

The merger will offer expanded program options through transfer and articulation agreements with University of Arkansas four-year institutions. The UA System merger will also include collaborating to provide a network for professional development resources for faculty and staff, educational delivery processes and resources, and employee health insurance cost-sharing network.

"I am extremely pleased that the distinguished Board of Rich Mountain Community College, and the institution's faculty, staff and students decided to associate with the University of Arkansas System. This institution has a long history of exceptional service to the communities it serves and I am pleased that the UA System is now positioned to work with the institution to continue that legacy. Plans are in place to involve University of Arkansas Community College at Rich Mountain faculty in discussions to expand transfer and other educational opportunities in the UA System to their students, and we look forward to learning from their faculty and administration in developing new approaches to assist the entire system as it seeks to grow both in size and quality in the years ahead," said Donald R. ## Burglary suspects plead guilty

A pair of suspects in a burglary investigation have plead guilty to one count each of residential burglary, a class B felony, as part of a plea agreement reached with the prosecuting attorney's office.

According to documents obtained from the Montgomery County Clerk's Office Lanna Faye Perkins, age 24 of Waldron, and Bryan Andrew Wallach, age 30 also of Waldron, were arrested in December as a result of an eight month investigation led by the Montgomery County Sheriff's Office.

The investigation began when the MCSO received a call on April 2, 2016, regarding an alleged burglary at the residence of James Perkins.

Perkins reported that a television, Remington 740 rifle and several items located outside his home had been stolen.

Investigators at the MCSO were contacted in July about someone in Waldron who might have information regarding stolen property from the burglary. The information led to a residence in Polk County where the gun was recovered. The persons in possession of the rifle stated they had purchased it from Perkins who signed a receipt upon sale of the gun.

According to court documents Perkins was picked up for questioning. She stated that she went to her ex-husband's house with Johnny Brown and Walach to get what they could. She went on to explain that she wanted to see her kids, but knew her ex-husband wouldn't let her see them.

A parole/probation officer search was done at the residence of Johnny Brown who was then taken to the Polk County Sheriff's Office for questioning.

Perkins was sentenced under Act 346 commonly known as the first offender's act. She was sentenced to 72 months supervised probation and was ordered to pay a $1,000 fine and $667.20 in fees and court costs.

Wallach was sentenced to 60 months supervised probation and was ordered to pay a $1,000 fine and $917.20 in fees and court costs.

Glenwood man facing fleeing charge

A Glenwood man has been charged with one count of felony fleeing after an alleged chase involving the Pike County Sheriff's Office ended up in Montgomery County.

According to documents obtained from the Montgomery County Clerk's Office Dutch Forga, age 32 of Glenwood, was charged with one count of fleeing, a class D felony, following an alleged incident that happened last November.

The Pike County Sheriff's Office responded to a call placed by Forga's mother, Vivian Billy. She stated that Forga was beating on her door and he was making threats. Court records state that Forga fled from officers and led them on a chase into Montgomery County. Officers also claimed he tried to ram their vehicles with his several times during the pursuit.

Documents state he was apprehended after getting stuck in a clear cut on Robinson Road.

Pike County officials charged him with aggravated assault, fleeing, DWI 1st offense, and no liability insurance 3rd offense. He is currently being held in an Arkansas Community Corrections Center.

A pretrial date has been set for the Montgomery County charge of fleeing for April 4. A trial date has been set for April 28. He is being held on a $5,000 bond.

Traffic stop leads to arrest

A parked car at the Black Springs Store led to the arrest of a Caddo Gap man and subsequent possession charges after a search of his vehicle allegedly turned up drugs and drug paraphernalia.

According to documents obtained from the Montgomery County Clerk's Office, Montgomery County Sheriff's Office deputy Stacy Watson was dispatched to the Black Springs Store after a call to the sheriff's office reported a man slumped over in a parked car at the location.

While in transit Watson met a car matching the description of the vehicle spotted at Black Springs Store and recognized the driver as John Wayne Meeks, age 37 of Caddo Gap. The officer called in to verify Meeks was driving on a suspended license and that he had signed a probation search waiver.

A traffic stop was made on Lavender Lane and Meeks was placed under arrest for driving on a suspended license.

A search of the vehicle resulted in the discovery of three tablets later identified as Dexmethylphenidate Hydrochloride and Alprazolam. A baggie containing a crystal like substance was located under a cell phone found in the car. A pack of cigarette rolling papers was also found in the car.

The 18th West Drug Task Force was called to assist. They performed a field test on the crystal substance and confirmed that it was methamphetamine. A small digital scale was also located in the car. Such scales are often used to measure out small amounts of drugs.

Meeks was charged with possession of methamphetamine with intent to deliver, a class C felony, and possession of drug paraphernalia, a class B felony.

A pretrial date has been set for April 4 and a jury trial date has been set for May 5.

Hittin' the Trails... Jerry Shields

“The Spruce Goose”

In your travels it is not often that you stumble upon something so remarkable it is hard to accept as reality. Many World Heritage sites fall into this category such Great Wall of China; the Cliff Dwellings at Mesa Verde NP in Colorado, The Stone Monastery on Skellig Michael Island off Ireland’s southwestern shores, all challenge our imagination. Sites such as these were built hundreds if not thousands of years ago.

One such experience was a visit to something that was built in 1946 in California and now resides in a museum in Oregon. Some years ago on a quest to tour the stately Queen Mary cruise ship now at permanent dock in Los Angeles, California as a convention center and hotel, I stumbled upon the “Spruce Goose” museum.

After winding around the crazy streets of Los Angeles we finally found the correct wharf where the Queen had settled into her permanent moorage. Even after fifty years at dock she still looked regal and huge. After touring the Queen Mary we walked across the parking area and discovered a museum that had only one display, the Spruce Goose seaplane.

I had read the colorful history of Howard Hughes, the billionaire moviemaker and flying enthusiast. His real love was the design of aircraft and one in particular was his proudest accomplishment, The Spruce Goose. In 1942 the US War Department was reeling from heavy losses to German submarines of our convoys delivering supplies to the European war theater.

The department issued a call to American industry to find a safer way to deliver vast amounts of war materials safely across the submarine infested seas. The designer of the famous Liberty Cargo Ships, Henry Kaiser, conceived the idea of developing a large flying cargo ship to deliver supplies above the waves. The general specs required the plane be able to deliver 750 fully equipped troops and two tanks.

In 1943 Kaiser teamed with aircraft designer Howard Hughes to design a huge air transport system. Finally in 1946, after Kaiser dropped out of the project in 1945, Hughes completed design of a mammoth seaplane. Due to war time controls of aluminum Hughes delivered a full sized prototype constructed completely of laminated wood and copper the first such laminated material ever produced.

The huge hanger housed this immense wooden aircraft that appeared as new as the day it was built. For the modest fee of $5.00 you could tour the inside of the craft. I couldn’t get the $5.00 out of my pocket fast enough for a casual guided tour by one of the several engineers hired by Hughes to care for this technical marvel until his death in 1976.

We climbed a tall ladder and stepped into what could only be described as a man-made wooden cavern that stretched endlessly toward the tail of the craft. Laminated illuminated struts like ribs of a giant blue whale gleamed in the dim lighting. There was an endless sea of 750 canvas seats for the troops stretching above a flat ramp for securing tanks or wartime vehicles.

We were on a catwalk into the interior of one of the 160-foot long wing with more than six-feet of headroom. Each wing was larger than most planes flying in 1946. We climbed a metal ladder up into the huge cabin where the pilot, co-pilot, navigator and engineer sat surrounded by windows almost 80-feet above the water’s surface.

I was granted permission to sit in the pilot’s seat and for just moment imagined feeling the rumbling thrust of eight turbo-charged prop engines, producing 24,000 HP, driving the plane across the waters of the bay slowing going airborne to cruise the harbor.

It was an amazing experience exploring the aircraft that Congressional detractors had crowed “this beast would never fly”. These naysayers were silenced when Hughes, on November 2, 1947 took the craft into the bay to test the eight 3000-HP engines and to everyone’s surprise lifted the craft above waves at 135 MPH for a mile long cruise. The craft was never produced but its wing design and turboprop engines were used on many aircraft over the coming years.

Last year as I was researching interesting sights for last year’s trip out west I discovered the huge plane had been sold after Hughes’ death. Eventually it was sold to the Evergreen Aviation & Space Museum in McMinnville, Oregon about sixty-miles southwest of Portland where you can currently be awed by its size and early technology. It is still in pristine condition. I am still regretting our travel schedule prevented another visit to this amazing plane.

Stevenson Family Donates Painting for Ouachita Center

The painting, After a Summer Rain was recently donated by Ed and Dorothy Ann Stevenson to be displayed in the Ouachita Center on the campus of the University of Arkansas Rich Mountain. The painting was commissioned by a nationally known local artist, Tyrone Lewis and exhibited in the 2007 Paint America Top 100 Art Competition. The painting illustrates a scene in the town of Cove, Arkansas and exemplifies the rural community where Ed Stevenson was born and raised. The Stevenson family chose to gift the painting for display to honor the artist's talent and to illustrate the beauty of Polk County through art. The framed artwork is on display in the Stevenson Gallery located in the main corridor of the Ouachita Center.
